Biographical Note

Louise Eugenia Herron was born in Dubuque, Iowa on December 3, 1897. She was the only child of Edward Herron and Mary Crouse. As a young girl Halliburton cultivated her artistic skill, drawing landscapes and flora she saw on walks taken with her father. In high school girls were unable to take technical drawing class as they were only open to the boys. Unhappy with this situation, Louise petitioned the superintendent of schools for permission to join these classes. The superintendent was not easily convinced but in 1915, Louise and her friend Mildred Berg were finally allowed to join the technical drawing and woodworking class alongside the boys. They would be the only girls in the class until the Dubuque Community School District required all schools and classes be made co-ed in the 1978-1979 school year.

While this is an impressive accomplishment, for Louise the far-reaching event during her high school years was convincing the other girls to change the custom of an overly feminine frock at graduation. Inspired by the speeches on women's suffrage, Louise designed and painted a new graduation style - a simple white dress with a sailor collar and a tie combining the school colors. Her female classmates were very receptive to the change and readily adopted the new attire.

During her high school years, Louise also designed covers for the school's literary magazine, The Echo. She was only one of three female students on the school magazine and yearbook staff.

Louise was a supporter of peace and justice work since her first exposure to the realities of war and the military draft during WWI. She was a member of the American Friends Service Committee (AFSC) and War Resistance League (WRL). In early 1930s, while living in Franklin, Indiana with her husband Robert Alexander Halliburton, she began her activities in resistance to war. Both Louise and her husband frequently wrote to President Roosevelt urging peace.

In the 1940s, Louise helped to organize the Reconstructionist Gang. This group was made up of people who sought to make the world more peaceful and just. Louise would often host meetings in her home.

Louise very regularly launched letter writing campaigns to urge politicians towards peaceful resolutions rather than violence. The Halliburton Collection contains hundreds of letters addressed to Senators, Congressmen and Presidents. For example, she wrote to President Roosevelt, to President Kennedy expressing her support of his disarmament policies, to President Nixon urging an end to the Vietnam War, and to President Ford in support of amnesty for conscientious objectors or draft-dodgers. She continued to write letters until her eyesight began to deteriorate due to cataracts in her advance age.

Scope and Content Note

The Louise E. Herron Halliburton Collection consists of personal correspondence, artifacts, photographs, works of art, including drawings and watercolors, and newspaper clippings.

Personal correspondence—which includes letters written by Halliburton's grandparents—in the collection spans from 1840 to 1991 and touches on topics such as peace movements, anti-war and anti-draft sentiments and initiatives, art, environmentalism, civil rights and race relations, along with personal finance. Halliburton's close relationship with her spouse, family members and friends are chronicled in over 500 letters and dozens of diaries written throughout her life.

The collection includes materials belonging to Halliburton's spouse, Robert Alexander Halliburton (R.A.H) (1897-1939) such as drafting tools, military ship technical drawings, biographical materials, along with copies of his doctoral dissertation. Notably, due to R.A.H.'s sudden death, Halliburton worked to complete and submit the necessary revisions to his dissertation required for R.A.H.'s posthumous doctorate in Political Science from Columbia University.

Halliburton's involvement in peace initiatives is preserved in the collection as correspondence with political figures including Presidents Nixon and Ford, conscientious objector Walter Gormley, and notes from the Dubuque Women's Peace Club, Reconstruction Gang and other organizations promoting peace. Halliburton was also concerned with women's rights, environmentalism and race relations as seen in her active participation in local groups and organizations.

While not a professional artist, Halliburton's proficiency and love for art is preserved in over 40 sketchbooks and 60 oversized drawings and watercolors. Halliburton's adventurous spirit is recorded in her travel memorabilia and collection of over 600 photographs. Additionally, the collection holds over 2,000 postcards collected on Halliburton's travels around the world. A visual record of Halliburton's life can be explored in over 4,000 photographs, negatives and slides within the collection.

Appendix 2 – Photograph Index

INDEX TO INDIVIDUAL PHOTOGRAPHS

The photographs in this collection have been divided into categories (Individuals Identified (II), People Identified (PI), People Unidentified (PU), Scenes Identified (SI), Scenes Unidentified (SU), and Art Photographs (AP)). Each photograph has been assigned a number which is written on the back of the photo and can be used to locate and identify it. Each category is listed separately. Many of these photographs also appear in the photo albums. Some photos which are unidentified in this list may be identified within one of the albums. The description accompanying the identification number are also written on the back of the photo. Some of the photos were identified by comparing them to previously identified photographs, but most were already identified by Louise H. Halliburton. The photographs are now stored in into separate folders and envelopes for each category.

INDIVIDUALS IDENTIFIED

Photos listed here have only one person in the picture. That person has been identified and is named on the back of the photo. Photos of more than one person where one or more has been identified are listed in the category of People Identified. Photos of one or more people where none are identified are listed in the general category of People Unidentified.
