could decide where his Catholic priests were needed and have the power to send them there. As it is a Chaplain is simply a headquarters Officer, and I wasn't ordained for that job of office clerk. Maybe some Catholic Agency could send civilian priests over to be where the troops are, completely free from Army time-wasting red tape.

The Cabrini Home is growing, and at present has 80 children, 40 still on a bottle, the eldest two and a half. It's dependent on the packages I get from the States. We now have a woman doctor, who is very good. She came in 'time to evacuate four bad cases, one syphilis, two diphtheria, one scarlet fever. The latter three died.

In my dealings with Catholic charities in Germany, and in my
